Group Members

Xu Chen, xca171@sfu.ca
Ilia Mosaddegh, ima37@sfu.ca
Alexander Domingo, ard17@sfu.ca
Meyer Kaur Sarna, mks53@sfu.ca
Mishika Bhandari, mba209@sfu.ca

Introduction

This document serves as the official team contract for our project. It outlines how we will communicate, collaborate, distribute work, resolve conflicts, and ensure fair contributions from all members. By agreeing to this contract, each member commits to upholding the expectations and responsibilities described below.

Group behaviours expected of each member

Work will be divided based on the strengths and experience of individual members, such as knowledge of Git or particular coding skills. The exact division of tasks will be decided once further information about the project is available. Each member is responsible for completing their own work on time and to the best of their ability.

To maintain a positive and productive environment, all members are expected to stay in regular contact with the group and to respect each other's schedules and circumstances. If unexpected issues arise, they should be communicated as soon as possible so the team can adjust accordingly.

Communication methods

Our primary means of communication will be through Discord, which we will use for most asynchronous interactions. Zoom will be used for remote meetings, and we aim to meet in person at least once per week, ideally on days when we already have class. Between meetings, Discord will also be used for quick updates and check-ins. When asking for help, members are expected to do so in advance whenever possible; in urgent cases, messages should be sent through Discord immediately.

Methods for resolving an impasse

Conflicts should first be handled within the group, with an emphasis on open communication and mutual understanding. Members are expected to take responsibility for their own work and to understand the importance of the project, which constitutes a significant portion of the course grade. If issues cannot be resolved internally, the teaching staff will be contacted for assistance.

Every team member is expected to contribute fairly. In extreme cases where a member significantly fails to contribute, for example, by doing no work at all, that individual may not receive the group grade. Such situations are to be treated as exceptional; smaller issues should be resolved through communication within the team.

By signing below, all team members agree to follow the principles and expectations set out in this contract.

Signatures:

Mishika Bhandari

Date: 30/09/2025